

Stony Brook Program in Public Health

Stony Brook's Program in Public Health Celebrates National Public Health Week with

Public Health Month!

We cordially invite you to attend a month-long array of events and programs centered around the theme of Public Health.

Monday, April 6

Mental Health in Sexual and Gender Minority Populations

A lecture sponsored by LGBTQ Medical Student Association
12-1 pm, HSC, Lecture Hall 3

Making a Commitment to Your Community: What does it mean to be a public hospital?

A talk from Dr. Pasternak, CEO of Stony Brook University Hospital
3:30-4:30 pm, HSC, Lecture Hall 1

Too Hot to Handle - Fire Safety Workshop

Sponsored by Office of Commuter Student Services and Off-Campus Living
5:30-6:30 pm, Student Activities Center, Room 302
RSVP at <http://tinyurl.com/hottohandle>

Wednesday, April 15

Implications of the Bodies that Matter Program at the Autonomous University of Mexico-Xochimilco

Presenter: Maria Guadalupe Huacuz Elias. Bodies that Matter is a grassroots initiative that addresses gender-based violence on a Mexican university campus.

Humanities Institute presentation, co-sponsored by the Program in Public Health, Student Affairs, and the Division of Undergraduate Education
4pm, Humanities 1008

Monday, April 20

New York is Dying

Why is New York Trailing the Country in Organ Donation?

What Can We Do to Help?

12-3:30pm, HSC, Lecture Hall 2
Register for this event at <http://bit.ly/LiveOnNY-event>

Friday, April 24

Join the Organization of Public Health Students and Alumni at Earthstock, Stony Brook's Annual Celebration of Earth Day.

11am-3pm, Academic Mall

National Public Health Week (April 6-12, 2015) is an initiative of the American Public Health Association, <http://www.nphw.org/>.

If you'd like your event to be considered part of Stony Brook's Public Health Month, please contact Joanie Maniaci at joanmarie.maniaci@stonybrook.edu